

Vote for new SGA constitution set

By Keenan Gingles

A long time talked about and all summer in the making, the SGA's newly proposed constitution is slated to go before student voters next week for ratification.

All LSUS students are entitled to vote on the document. The balloting is scheduled to begin Tuesday for night students and Thursday for day students. It will end for both the following Monday.

The new document is primarily the work of David Towns, SGA Office of Research director, with the help of about 20 volunteer students. Towns, a junior majoring in pre-law, wrote the proposed constitution under the direction of SGA President Tony Sanders. The SGA president created the Office of Research as a permanent executive committee after taking office last spring.

Citing some of the limitations of the present constitution, Towns called it "a two-year-old constitution written for a two-year university." According to both Towns and Sanders, the document does not provide for a just representation of students to the senate. They also said that amending it to fit the needs of a four-year institution is next to impossible.

Senate to be changed

Provided the document is ratified by 51 per cent of the student body, the senate will be reapportioned with senators elected to represent their particular college rather than their class as the present constitution directs. That document has come under sharp attack from both SGA officials and members of the student body.

The critics of the current constitution charge that the interests of students in particular colleges outweigh the interests of whatever class — such as freshman, sophomore, etc. — a student is in. In the past, they pointed out, all the colleges have not been adequately represented in student government. Most senators belong to the College of Liberal Arts.

Under the proposed new constitution, the number of senators elected to the SGA would be figured on the basis of one senator for every 200 students in each college. The minimum number of senators from each college is fixed at one.

In addition to the senators elected from each college, there would also be some elected at large. The number of senators at large would be determined by the ratio of one senator per 300 students in the entire University.

Representation explained

As an example of how the system would work if the proposed document is ratified, suppose there are 600 students enrolled in the College of Education. Education students would be entitled to elect three senators to the SGA, based on the above ratio, and would also vote for a specific number of candidates who had filed for senate offices at large.

Judging from the number of students registered in the entire University, which is over 2800, there should be about 10 senators elected at large. This figure is again based on the above ratios and this example applies to the other colleges as well.

Though the manner of amending the proposed constitution remains essentially the same as the present document, the number of senators needed to propose amendments and also the majority of the students needed to ratify them has been altered.

A two-thirds vote of the senators representing a quorum is required to propose an amendment and it must receive a two-thirds vote of the entire student body before it can take effect under the present constitution.

Requires two-thirds vote

The proposed document, however, requires two-thirds of the entire Senate to propose amendments and a majority of two-thirds of those voting necessary for ratification.

According to Sanders, the present constitution is difficult to amend because seldom does two-thirds of the student body ever bother to vote. According to him, the changes in the new document will make it easier to be amended and, therefore, more flexible.

The executive branch of the SGA is also in for some changes if the new document is voted in. One of the proposed changes stirred some controversy at a meeting held to discuss alterations before the document is to be submitted for student body action. After the proposed article on student funding was read at the meeting, questions were raised by some of those present and by the "Almagest."

The section on student funding provides for a "general fund appropriation" to be made to the SGA president at the beginning of each fall semester to be used for the "maintenance and operation" of his office.

Checks exist

Questions arose as to whether this fund could be abused by whoever happened to be the president, but the affair was settled after Sanders showed that specific checks by University regulations existed to keep that from occurring.

475 new spaces added

Parking lot construction begins

By Linda Lockwood

The parking lot that Gov. Edwards promised last fall is currently being constructed.

This concrete lot should be completed in early September, according to Dr. Kenneth M. Purdy, dean of student affairs.

It is adjacent to the old parking lot in front of the Liberal Arts Building and will include approximately 261 parking slots.

Another parking lot was completed during the summer and will park 210 cars.

This black-top lot is next to the new concrete lot and is also in front of the Liberal Arts Building.

These two new lots will be connected by a sidewalk.

While new parking lots were being constructed, the old gravel lot between the tennis courts and snack shack was receiving a face-lift.

The holes were filled in and it should be able to weather another school year, according to Dr. A. J. Howell, Vice Chancellor for Business Affairs.

Although 475 new spaces have been added the parking lots are full during peak class hours (9 through 11) due to added enrollment.

But the lots should be adequate if the students will park in all lots, including those farthest away from campus, said Dr. Purdy.

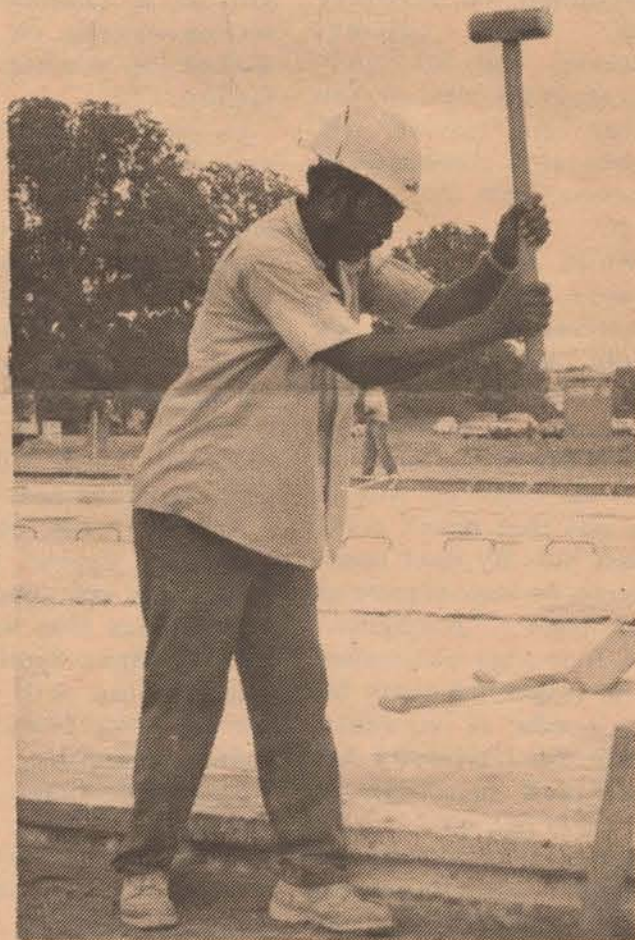

Students are encouraged to observe areas designated for faculty, and special parking for disabled students.

In addition cars should not be backed into slots. This rule is not made to harass students but to help prevent minor accidents, according to Dr. Purdy.

Penalties for University traffic violations must be paid at the Business office on the first floor of the Science Building within 24 hours.

An additional one dollar a day fine will be charged for delinquent tickets.

Students who fail to pay traffic violations will not be allowed to re-register or secure a transcript of credits until the obligation has been met, according to the administration.

LSUS Student Union to be built

Plans are being made by the LSU Board of Directors to appoint an architect to design and construct a campus student union.

Three million dollars, $2.4 million for the building and $600,000 for site work, was recently allocated by Gov. Edwards.

Edwards feels that the new union building is necessary to meet the demands of LSUS with its expansion to a 4-year institution, said Sen. C. K. Carter Jr.

No definite plans have been made but it is rumored that the union will probably be a two-story building with primarily a glass front, said Tony Sanders, SGA president.

Sanders, David Towns, and Randy Beach, officers of the SGA, were directly responsible for persuading Gov. Edwards to allocate money for the union.

They promoted the need for a union to area legislatures and the governor while attending a La. Student Association meeting in Baton Rouge in May. Beach even cornered the governor in the bathroom to talk to him about the union, said Sanders.

Construction on the union, which will probably be located at the end of the mall between the Library and Liberal Arts Building, is estimated to be completed in three years, said Sanders.

Curious students are asking if the union will house a bowling alley, a snack bar, pool tables or a swimming pool.

These and other questions will have to be answered later when decisions have been made, a university administration spokesman said.

SGA election

By Randy Griffith

Election dates for new senators for the SGA have been set, according to the SGA Election Board. All students, full or part-time, are eligible to vote.

For daytime students, the elections will be held on Sept. 26 and 27. For nighttime students, voting will last from Sept. 23 through Sept. 26.

The final date for a student to file a petition stating his intent to run is Sept. 10 at 5:00 p. m. in room 140 LA.

A student will have a choice, under the proposed new constitution, to run as a senator at large or as a Senator representing only his particular college. Term of office is one academic year.

A senator must be a full-time student, have a cumulative grade average of at least 2.0 and not be on scholastic or disciplinary probation.

A panel discussion for senatorial candidates has been tentatively set up for Sept. 20.

Almagest has new look

As the only communications medium on campus, the "Almagest" has always wielded a large amount of power in shaping and motivating student opinion.

This semester, we hope, will be no different. If anything, we hope to increase it as much as we can. As a new staff, we now make a clean break with the past. Where former Almagest staffs have tried to motivate and shape opinions mostly from this page, this one intends to do it by giving our readers a more comprehensive and thorough coverage of news than they have ever received.

Of course, as a student publication we have the responsibility to speak out on any issue that affects student interests, whether it emanates from the administration, the student government or anywhere else. This column, however, will not solely represent the views of one editor, but instead will represent a consensus of opinions from the entire staff.

While hoping not to appear to be patting ourselves on the back, we would like to point out a few changes in this semester's publication. One of the first alterations that we came up with is the one that hasn't come about yet. By next issue, though, we hope to print an eight-page "Almagest."

A four-page publication is no longer adequate for the needs of students. While the University has continued to climb in enrollment, the "Almagest" has stood at a standstill, able to provide no more news than the day it started.

"Only four pages" has long been the excuse — and a legitimate one — of many editors for not giving more space to contributions emanating outside the staff. Now, as a matter of policy, the "Almagest" will welcome news, student editorials and feature material from students and faculty.

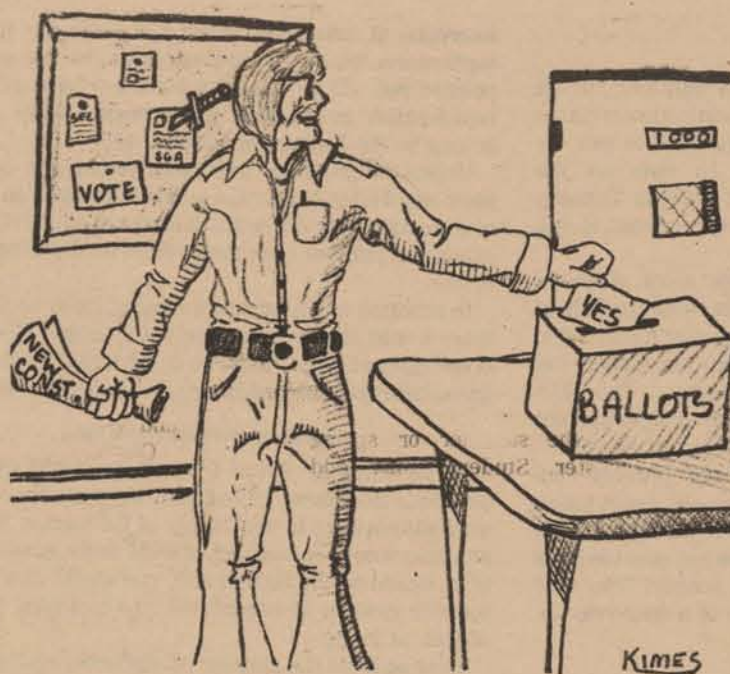

We will also welcome feedback from our readers in the form of letters to the editor. Space and time allowing, they will be printed, subject to the conditions printed in the masthead. Whether you agree or disagree with us, or just have a suggestion, then let us know.

As part of our expanded coverage and as a service to LSUS students and faculty, the "Almagest" will provide some coverage of entertainment and will begin next week to provide a classified ad section—details on page 4—free to students and faculty.

In entertainment, we have begun an entertainment calendar highlighting some events in and around Shreveport. From time to time specific articles will appear on different kinds of entertainment, and a bi-weekly column on recorded music will appear beginning next week.

Another new column that will appear every week is the one appearing on this page that we will call "Campus Spotlight." The column will summarize news from other college campuses.

There are many more changes in the "Almagest," but we'll stop here. At any rate, we hope you'll like them.

Constitution supported

Speaking out

After months of careful research and a lot of preparation, the SGA Office of Research will submit its proposed constitution to LSUS students, and the "Almagest" recommends that it be ratified.

The "Almagest" is aware, as are many members of the student body and the SGA, of many of the faults in the present SGA constitution. If the document is passed, at least two of its major flaws will be corrected.

One of those flaws in the present document is the gross inequality of representation that it provides for. The "Almagest" believes that because the present system calls for representation on the basis of classification as to freshman, sophomore, junior, it is unfair. This type of representation may be all right for high school student councils, but for students of a four-year university, it is wrong.

We feel that a more just representation of students' interests and desires can be had if the student senate is elected on the basis of college, which the new proposed constitution directs. This provision would give the SGA the system of governance it wants and needs to be more responsive to students.

The strongest argument for passage of the proposed constitution lies in the fact that for all practical purposes, the present document cannot be amended.

This is because of the clause in it that requires a two-thirds majority of the entire student body for ratification of any proposed amendment. Because of the normally light turnout of voters, amendment cannot be achieved.

This provision would also be corrected in the new constitution as it provides that an amendment can be ratified by a majority of two-thirds of those voting. This provision would give LSUS students a more flexible system which we believe would better serve them.

Although overall we like the proposed constitution, the "Almagest" is somewhat disappointed that the judiciary article, the elections article and the impeachment article, that were written into the new proposed constitution originally, were left out.

The judiciary article was taken out at the direction of SGA President Tony Sanders after insisting that the article could not be implemented in time for the senate elections. Sanders' arguments may have merit, but we're unconvinced that the court could not have been implemented.

In the past, we understand that there have been some differences of opinion over the meaning of certain passages in the present constitution, with no one having the authority to decide. The judiciary would have assumed this function.

Even minus the judiciary, the document represents a lot of improvement over what we now have.

Sports lib

Women can play an important role in life. They can manage anything from a house cleaning to a budget, a home to a job. These things are all fine. Women have slowly gained equality in about everything—except sports.

Last semester many sports offered in the intramural program to women flopped due to lack of interest. Sure, men are great to watch play basketball, flag football or softball, but how about you, lady?

Women should maintain an active balance between work and relaxation. Maybe you blush and insist that you don't know the rules, you don't know how to play or that you would be just plain embarrassed.

Hogwash! Women need to be as active or even more so than their male counterparts. Don't worry about being embarrassed—most women are about equal on the court or field. "Any Women Can" is not just a title for a book. You've come a long way baby—don't stop now.

College Spotlight

Lafayette, La.—USL has a student information and referral center which is open 24 hours a day. Students may call this "Hot Line" for job replacement, counseling, apartment finding, and complaints about the University.

However, the counseling does not include anything on abortion because allegations of releasing abortion information a previous semester almost led to criminal proceedings against the center by the district attorney's office.

Auburn, Ala.—Streaking can be expensive, according to Auburn University students who owe a $576.87 bill for damages done to dormitories during the winter streaking incidents.

The bill will be paid from the students' contingency fund which is created from students activities fees to cover damages which cannot be attributed to single individuals.

The main damage was to screens which were knocked out of windows and bent past repair.

Baton Rouge, La.—LSU Foreign Language Dept. offers a 5 hr. Chinese course.

It is not difficult because the sentence structure is roughly the same as in English, but the rules of grammar are much more stable and less open to variables than in our grammar, explained one student.

The faculty believes this course is beneficial because of the increasing trade between America and the Far East, and the number of Chinese students (more than 200) who attend LSU.

CAMPUS BRIEFS

Debate Club

A debate club is being organized on campus this semester, according to Dr. Frank Lower, assistant professor of communications. All interested students are asked to see Dr. Lower in LA 352.

Besides group debate, individual events, such as oral interpretation and persuasive speech, will also be stressed.

Several trips have been tentatively scheduled, including one to Kentucky in October and one to the national collegiate debates in April.

Honor Society

Officers have been elected for the Alpha Sigma Omicron Honor Society according to Dr. Robert Leitz, assistant professor of English, who is the club's sponsor.

David Gorsulowsky will serve as president. Other officers include Ronnie Hermes, first vice president; Carl Hines, second vice president; Bruce Hennigan, third vice president and Ginger Neel, secretary-treasurer.

Last date to add

Tuesday, Sept. 3, is the final date for adding classes or removing incomplete grades from the summer or spring semester. Students may add subjects by obtaining the approval of his advisor and filing the completed schedule change form in the Office of the Registrar.

Drama Club to meet

The new Drama Club, LSUS Art Theatre, will have a meeting Wednesday at noon in room 304 in the Liberal Arts Building.

Officers will be elected and semester plans discussed. Membership is open to all students and anyone interested may call Mary Jarzabek at 865-1737 for information.

Contributions needed

The student literary publication, Spectra, is now accepting contributions of poetry, prose, essays, short stories, art work, photographs and foreign language entries.

Contributions can be left in the Spectra office, LA 225, open from 9:00 a. m. to 2:00 p. m. Monday through Friday, or in the envelope attached to the door.

Spectra will be published this spring and submissions will be accepted up to mid-February.

The editors of Spectra urge all students and faculty members to support this publication with their contributions.

Sports news

Entry forms for flag football and softball are due today.

A tennis meeting will be held for all interested persons in LA 132, September 5, at 4 p. m. This includes any student, staff or faculty member interested in competing in tennis games this fall.

SLTA to meet

An organizational meeting for this year's Student Louisiana Teacher's Association (SLTA) has been set for Sept. 12 at 4:30 p. m. in the Science Lecturers Auditorium.

According to Robert Banning, president, this meeting will be primarily to set up working committees. All interested people, particularly those in an education field, are invited.

Dr. Bobby Tabarlet, dean of the college of education, is to be the featured speaker at the meeting.

Artists and Lecturers

Pollster and pianist featured

The Artists & Lecturers Committee has recently released its fall series of speakers and entertainers.

The engagements, all open to the public free of charge, will include George Gallup Jr. on Sept. 9 at 10:00 a. m.; Alexander Fielder and Robert Allison on Sept. 27 at 7:30 p. m.; Tom Noel on Oct. 9 at 7:30 p. m.; Tom Horton on Oct. 25 at 11:00 a. m.; and Robert Katz on Nov. 22 at 7:30 p. m.

Each presentation will be held in the Science Lecture Auditorium.

Gallup, the man behind the Gallup Poll, will speak on the current moods of American people, the roll of the popular survey in a democracy, how the research is conducted and contemporary events. Gallup is also currently co-authoring a book on the 1972 presidential election.

Fielder and Allison, the distinguished flutist and pianist duo, will play selected works of Bach, Beethoven, Rhene-Baton and Faure.

Fielder, who studied violin and piano before learning the flute, has been soloist for some 50 conductors, including Thomas Beecham and Igor Stravinsky.

Allison, currently on the faculty of the University of Texas at Arlington, has studied piano with Jean Wynn, Lorry Wallfisch and Paul Van Katvijh.

The man who claimed the invention of jazz, Jelly Roll Morton, will be characterized by Tom Noel. Morton, a legendary Louisiana native whose songs included "The Shreveport Stomp", will be brought to life with a combination of singing, dialogue and piano jazz.

Tom Horton, Executive in Charge of Production for the TV series "The Undersea World of Jacques Cousteau," will present "L'Adventure Cousteau."

The program includes films, slides and anecdotes from the popular Cousteau series.

Horton, a 20-year veteran of the ocean industry, is also a member of the Marine Technology Society.

Finally, Tom Katz will present, on the 11th anniversary of John F. Kennedy's assassination, an inquiry into the tragedy and the controversial events surrounding the event of the decade.

No, it's a new 500 ton York Chiller recently installed in our power plant. Its purpose is to help handle existing heat load in campus buildings and its cooling capacity will take care of an additional building. (Photo by Irvin Schueler)

★ Constitution vote set

Another part of the new constitution will serve to curb some of the executive's power to form SGA executive departments. The new document requires senate ratification to form them and provides also for senate ratification of appointees. The SGA president must also have senate approval before dissolving any executive department.

Other changes in the executive branch under the proposed document will include doing away with the executive council, which had no powers delegated to it by the present document; making the now elected offices of secretary and treasurer appointive, subject to senate ratification; and the establishment of a Summer Executive Commission, to be composed of the SGA president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and members of the senate attending summer school.

Initially planned to be included in the proposed constitution were articles providing changes in the election board, impeachment procedures and for creation of a judicial branch.

Provisions scrapped

Earlier this week, however, the decision was made by Sanders to scrap the provisions and instead substitute into the proposed constitution Article VI and Article VII of the present document.

Sanders said that implementation of the proposed judicial branch would be difficult in the amount of time available. He cited the nearness of senate elections and the amount of time needed to set up the court.

The article on the judicial branch provided for the establishment of a Student Superior Court with power to render legislation by the SGA unconstitutional, to serve as the election board and to investigate or appoint an investigating committee during impeachment proceedings.

Pilot determined as mascot

By Gina Gordey

The Riverboat Pilot has been selected as the official mascot of LSUS, as determined by the Board of Supervisors meeting in May. Blue and gold are the official colors.

Donald Alexander, assistant professor of Fine Arts, has agreed to prepare sketches to determine the official "pilot".

Intercollegiate sports programs cannot be established at universities until a formal mascot has been appointed.

Even though LSUS now has a mascot an intercollegiate sports program cannot become definite until P. E. facilities are established.

For several years the LSU Baton Rouge Tiger served as the LSUS mascot.

When the University obtained four year status the administration and state board of directors decided LSUS needed their own mascot.

"Mascot and colors will do a great deal to establish an identity with the community and within the student body itself. Unity is a factor that has long been needed on this campus and it should be easier to achieve now," said Randall Beach, director of Community and Government Affairs.

SEC plans activities

By Linda Lockwood

Friday night movies, shorts in the shack and a university-wide dance are some of the highlights the Student Entertainment Committee (SEC) is planning for this semester.

"Shorts in the Shack" are 15 to 30 minute comedy flicks to be shown every Monday at noon in the snack shack.

Students and faculty are invited to bring a sack lunch or order lunch there and watch the free films, said Rebel Brown, SEC chairman.

Three short films of Abbott and Costello will be shown on Monday, Sept. 10, while a Little Rascals flick will be shown on Sept. 17.

Other films will include the Three Stooges, W. C. Fields, Charlie Chaplin and Laurel and Hardy.

The first SEC Friday night movie, "Save the Tiger," featuring Jack Lemmon, will be shown at 8:00 p. m. on Sept. 13 in the Science Lecturers Auditorium.

Each student (and faculty member) may bring a friend and both will be admitted free with presentation of a student ID card.

Other films will include "Little Big Man," Sept. 20; "Sunder," Oct. 4, "The African Queen," Nov. 8 and "Charley Varrick," Nov. 15.

Prior to a double feature Marx Brothers film, Oct. 25, will be a live performance by the comedy team "Joey Edmonds and Thom Curley."

Future plans include a university show and dance, Nov. 1, featuring "Dean and Scott" who are celebrity impressionists.

"We encourage all students to participate in these and other campus activities," Brown said.

Sports assistants named

Sue Bilich, a senior in general studies, has been named the assistant of intramurals in charge of women's competition. She will be available for questions any women may have concerning women in intramurals.

Marvin Street, a sophomore in general studies, was named assistant in charge of men's competition. Both Sue and Marvin will assist Mr. Dino with intramural activities in the fall semester. (Photo: Deb Lunsford)

Chess Tournaments

George Leritte wants to organize an LSUS chess team to compete against the Northwestern chess team. Any interested student can reach him in the physics dept.

The Shreveport-Bossier Chess Club is sponsoring a tournament at Captain Shreve Hotel Sept. 21 and 22. All interested students or faculty must register there at 8:30 a. m. Saturday, Sept. 21.

The tournament will be rated by the United States Chess Federation (USCF) and all participants must pay $10, to join the federation and a $10 entrance fee. For information call Mrs. Lowell Brown Jr. at 686-2681.

Classes will not meet Monday, Sept. 1, but will resume to the normal schedule on Tuesday.

The Library will also be closed Sunday and Monday in observance of Labor Day.

BSU fall retreat

"Chosen to Be" will be the theme of the Baptist Student Union's fall retreat to be held at Hodges Gardens next weekend. All interested students must register by Sept. 4 at the Baptist Center, 2907 Woodlawn.

The bus will leave from the Baptist Student Union at 2 p. m. on Friday, Sept. 6 and will return to Shreveport by Sunday Sept. 8 at 10:30 a. m.

The total cost of the retreat, $16.50 per person, will pay for registration, transportation, two nights in the Hodges Gardens Motor Inn, gate pass into the Gardens, recreation facilities and all meals with the exception of Saturday and Sunday breakfasts.

Many times students and staff wish to sell, buy or trade something. Perhaps a babysitter, apartment-mate, or work is wanted. If you wish to place an ad in the "Almagest", come by the office, LA 328, or contact any staff member. This service is free of charge to the students, faculty and staff of LSUS.

Sports Calendar

Intramural sports are for everyone this year — from the vigorous basketball to the less strenuous bridge games. Since the addition of the games in the snack shack, the competition has grown in intramural activity. Students must fill out and return entry forms for each event to be entered to the Intramural office (Liberal Arts Building). Faculty and students are eligible to compete in all sports activities.

LSUS announces 25 new teachers

If faculty additions are an indication of expansion, LSUS is definitely a university on the grow. Twenty-five new faculty members are present on our campus this fall, and every college, excluding General Studies, will have minimum of four new faculty members.

The College of Sciences has appointed five new members to its faculty.

Dr. A. L. McKinney, associate professor of mathematics, received B.S. and M.S. degrees at Louisiana Tech and a Ph.D. degree at the University of Oklahoma.

Dr. Edward W. Carriere, assistant professor of physics, holds a B.S. degree from Loyola of New Orleans and M.S. and Ph.D. degrees from LSU-Baton Rouge, all in physics.

Dr. Robert G. Kalinsky, assistant professor of biological sciences, earned a B.S. degree at University of Dayton and M.S. and Ph.D. degrees at Ohio State University.

Dr. Joseph J. Cutcher, assistant professor of biological sciences, received B.S. and M.S. degrees from LSU-Baton Rouge and a Ph.D. degree at Ohio State.

Dr. Robert R. Haynes, assistant professor of biological sciences, received his B.S. degree at Louisiana Tech. His M.S. degree was earned at the University of Southwestern Louisiana and Ph.D. degree was awarded at Ohio State.

The College of Liberal Arts has received nine new faculty members this fall.

Dr. Wilfred L. Buerin, professor of English, holds B.A., M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Tulane University.

Gundi R. Williams, French instructor, has studied at Dolmetscher Institute Gernersheim and University of Washington.

Dr. Bruce M. Lancaster, assistant professor of political science, received a B.A. degree with highest honors at Mississippi State. He received graduate degrees from Royal College of Defense Studies in London and American University in Washington, D.C.

Doris L. Lynch, history instructor, earned B.A. and M.A. degrees at Southern University and a teaching certificate at Kansas State.

Dr. Donald G. Sanderson, assistant professor of philosophy, was awarded B.A. and M.A. degrees at Florida State University and a Ph.D.

degree at University of Texas. Donald J. Alexander, assistant professor of fine arts, earned a B.A. degree in advertising at Louisiana Tech and a M.F.A. degree in design at University of Kansas.

Dr. Frank J. Lower, assistant professor of communications, received B.A. and M.A. degrees at Adams State College in Alamosa, Colorado, and a Ph.D. degree at Florida State.

Alice C. Morgan, assistant professor of communications, earned a B.S. degree at East Texas Baptist College and an M.Ed. degree at East Texas State University. She received a radio license at Elkins Radio License School in Dallas.

Norman Dolch, assistant professor of sociology, received a B.A. degree at Bethany College and a M.A. degree at University of Missouri at Columbia.

Five new faculty members have been appointed to the College of Education.

Dr. Edna I. Yarbrough, associate professor of health and physical education, received a B.S. degree at Texas Women's University and an Ed.D. degree at University of Arkansas.

Dr. David B. Gustavson, assistant professor of education, holds B.S. and M.A. degrees from Murray State University in Kentucky and an Ed.D. degree from Indiana University.

Dr. LaVerne R. Bennett is the educational consultant for the LSUS special education center. She earned a B.S. degree at North Texas State where she graduated with honors, an M.Ed. degree at Hardin-Simmons and an Ed.D. degree at Northwestern State.

John B. Powell III is an assistant professor of education and director of conferences and institutes. He received a B.A. degree at Louisiana Tech and an M.Ed. degree at LSU-Baton Rouge.

Four new faculty members have been appointed to the College of Business.

Dr. Marilyn Winborne, professor of accounting, earned a B.S.C. degree from Texas Christian University, an M.B.A. from Southern Methodist University and a Ph.D. degree from University of Texas.

Larry E. Farmer, accounting instructor, was awarded a B.S. degree in accounting at the University of Arkansas at Little Rock and an M.S. degree in general business at Mississippi State.

Joseph Abramson, assistant professor of business administration, holds a B.S. degree from LSU and an M.B.A. degree from Mississippi State.

Stephen D. Owens, assistant professor of business administration, earned a B.A. degree in political science and an M.B.A. degree, both from Lamar University.

Two new library staff members round out the new faculty appointments this fall.

Richard L. Colquette, associate librarian and coordinator of public services, holds B.A. and M.S. degrees from LSU-Baton Rouge and an M.B.A. degree from Columbia University.

Mary L. Bowman, serials librarian and a senior librarian, received a bachelor of science in English at Grambling College and a master of science degree in library science at Atlanta University.

That's Entertainment

Shreveport Little Theatre

"Man of La Mancha" opened last night for a 10-performance run through Sept. 14. It will show evenings Thursday through Saturday, with one matinee this Sunday.

This musical drama, an adaptation of the classic Don Quixote, has a 16th century Spanish setting and is the first musical the theatre has produced in many years.

The theatre, located at 812 Margaret Place, is under the supervision of a new resident director, Michael Vetrie.

Military and student tickets are $3.50 while regular tickets are $5.00.

Beverly Barn Playhouse

"The 90-Day Mistress," a comedy starring Kathy Garver, starts tonight and will continue through Sept. 22. The playhouse is located at 8000 E. Kings Highway, 1 mile south from LSUS.

Reservations must be made by contacting the Barn and the ticket includes a gourmet buffet dinner and show.

Hirsch Memorial Coliseum

"Disney on Parade," a colorful show of over 100 Disney characters live on stage, shows at 7:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday and 6 p.m. Sunday.

Matinees at two p.m. will highlight Saturday and Sunday afternoon. Tickets ($3, $4, $5 and $1 for 12 and under) can be purchased at Grant's stores or at the Coliseum. Reservations must be made.

Hayride U.S.A.

Hayride U.S.A., a new attraction in town for country and western music lovers, offers name entertainers every Saturday night from 7 to 9:30 p.m. New talents have the opportunity to perform at the Friday night show.

Saturday nights will be "family night" and there will be no alcoholic beverages served.

Hayride U.S.A. is located seven miles north of Bossier City on the Benton Road. Tickets are $4.25 advanced and $5.25 at the door and can be purchased at any Stan's Record Shop or at the door on Saturday afternoons.

Anyone interested in performing can call Ron Diivlio at 742-7803 for an appointment and audition.

Tannya Tucker will be the featured entertainer this Saturday.

LSUS Library Exhibit

A nostalgia exhibit by Shreveport artists Fred E. Goza Jr. and Drew Hunter is on display in the library until Sept. 20. Goza, a graduate of Louisiana Tech University, teaches commercial art for Caddo parish schools. Hunter, a graduate of Centenary College, is art director for KSLA TV.

The exhibit, sponsored by Menasco Studios, is open to the public free of charge.
